TUESDAY, OCTOBER 14th, 1862

Inauguration of President Mitre.

On Sunday, both Chambers of Congress met, to invest General Mitre with the Presidency. At 1 p.m., Dr Alsina took the chair, the house being densely crowded, and the whole corps diplomatique in attendance. General Mitre, entering the Chamber with Dn Marcos Paz, they took their seats on either side of the chairman. The oath was then administered to each in succession, and Dr Alsina pronounced the following splendid oration.

Dr Alsina's speech.

Mr President.

The solemn oath, which you have just taken, completes the happy election of the Argentine delegates, investing you, from this moment with the high dignity of chief magistrate of the Republic of the River Plate.

The National Congress salutes you as such, and tenders, through me, its most sincere congratulations to your Excellency and to the people here represented, for it sees in this glorious event a new pledge of the fulfilment of its dearest wishes.

Immense, certainly, is the task which you propose to accomplish, and tremendous the responsibility which you have now contracted before God and your country-before that people which to-day ratifies you to power, and to morrow will sit in judgment on you. Congress and the nation will know what obstacles will beset your steps; but they confide in your firmness and genius to overcome all. You find a nation on the brink of ruin, in the tying epoch of political and moral re-construction. You find for the most part, a lamentable want of institutions, habits of order, and enlightened ideas. You find many pressing necessities, moral and material, to be satisfied. You find whole provinces weighed down by misery, who turn to you their anxious gaze in search of assistance and consolation.

But all this should not alarm your Excellency, for we cannot be so ungrateful to Divine Providence as to forget that the present state of the Republic affords more reason to hope than to despair, of its future. The troubles and difficulties are fewer in number than the means at hand for a National regeneration. You may rely confidently on the aid of Congress which will be ever ready to support and sustain your policy, in the belief that you will never err from the path of strict legality. You may also confide in the provincial governments and authorities: as well as in the magnificent testimony of the national vote so lately given, from one end to the other of the land, by the public, in favor of the renowned hero of the 17th September. That vote is stamped with the rarest and eloquent characteristics of unanimity and freedom, which must speak loudly to your intellect and heart. You may rely on the growing wealth and resources of the various provinces. You may rely on the habits of subordination, which are, every day, gaining strength amongst us. You may rely even on the gloomy concentrations, which late years of misfortune have indelibly graven on the popular mind, as a new pledge for tranquility and improvement. In two and fifty years of turmoil and affliction, the people have not only learned to value and upheld their rights, but also to fulfil their every duties: they have become persuaded that only in union can be found strength; in union, security; in peace, progress; and in liberty, greatness.

You can such varied elements of action and moral power, which your talents will properly develop, your labours will be less arduous, and Congress is assured that you will successfully fulfil your high obligations.

Those same sacred and glorious obligations will also fall on me. Raised by the public voice to rule the destinies of the Argentine republic, in the name and interests of the principles which have triumphed, and brought about the present situation, I will be remembering the great and useful lessons of historical experience which you have just invoked. I will not forget that these very principles which mark the beginning and end of revolutions, and consolidation of states. Faithful to these principles, for which Argentines have so long combated, and the effusion of tears and blood, I will remember always the irresistible force which they bring with them, and which accompanies those men who are led but to them in prosperity and in misfortune. I will bear in mind that I am about to preside over the destinies of the Argentine people, in union with a Congress, the half of whose members were, a few years ago, penniless outcasts in a foreign land: I will remember that the illustrious citizen now presiding was once a galley-slave of tyranny, until he escaped to the camp of the enemy, and return ultimately to serve his native land. I will remember that the vote of the nation sent us out as a Vice-president for the republic in the bloom of youth, progress, happiness and glory of the great Argentine people.

The President's Speech.

Mr. Chairman,

I find the full solemnity of the religious and patriotic oath which I have just taken; I feel also the immense responsibility which weighs upon my shoulders by virtue of the unanimous vote of the Argentine people so freely given in favor of my humble self, and in accepting it I have contracted the obligation to respond to their noblest aspirations, even laying down my life, if necessary for the happy fulfilment of the same. I feel the grand necessity which this ceremony requires from the new and auspicious circumstance of finding the Argentine Republic assembled for the first time! The whole Argentine family without the exception of any one of its members, all united by the love of a sole idea, and subordinate to one law. Above all, I feel, that in contracting this pledge, I am solemnly engaged myself to restore to the people with the enjoyment of liberty, happiness, and advancement, the plenitude of legal power which they have brought to a deposit in my hands, to whose chief functionary, and the representative of their principles—and if, I could for a moment have forgotten this, your solemn and unanimous call to the exercise of the same, would have reminded me of the same. Honour, I do not bring here to the National Congress, a preconceived notion, nor have I to express the theory or aspiration of a single individual. My programme is already traced out in the minds and hearts of all men: it is read in the long catalogue of necessities of the time: it is chiefly found in the preceptive of the Constitution which I have just sworn, and also in the principles of good government, liberty and civilization which the people have inscribed on their memorious banners now floating in the breeze of many a battle-field, never to be lowered. To carry out this programme, to direct the great works now in progress, to substitute order for anarchy, and consolidate the Argentine Republic, I assure it, I will therefore, rely on the unanimous vote which has raised me to power, and which will accompany me to the close of my career. I rely on the assistance of all men of all parties, with whom clear hands and a heart void of political rancour can take part in the great work at which we are all engaged, I rely on the stimulus of universal sympathy which can meet with an ally, in this new and brilliant Aurora of Argentine regeneration dawns upon us; and more especially I rely on the able and enlightened co-operation of a Congress freely elected, which the members have now tendered me.

Raised by the public voice to rule the destinies of the Argentine republic, in the name and interests of the principles which have triumphed, and brought about the present situation, I will be remembering the great and useful lessons of historical experience which you have just invoked. I will not forget that these very principles which mark the beginning and end of revolutions, and consolidation of states. Faithful to these principles, for which Argentines have so long combated, and the effusion of tears and blood, I will remember always the irresistible force which they bring with them, and which accompanies those men who are led but to them in prosperity and in misfortune. I will bear in mind that I am about to preside over the destinies of the Argentine people, in union with a Congress, the half of whose members were, a few years ago, penniless outcasts in a foreign land: I will remember that the illustrious citizen now presiding was once a galley-slave of tyranny, until he escaped to the camp of the enemy, and return ultimately to serve his native land. I will remember that the vote of the nation sent us out as a Vice-president for the republic in the bloom of youth, progress, happiness and glory of the great Argentine people.

I will remember that all the men of heart and energy, who have contributed to the regeneration, were persecuted and involved in the smoke and carnage of lost battle fields, where their brethren perished. I therefore hope that the All powerful, who sustains the weak and gives them strength to conquer in a just cause, will be pleased to preserve us from the fatal consequences of the day's labours, and from the divine Providence, whose protection is now displayed towards the Argentine people, that He will continue to shower down His benedictions on the glorious though unfortunate country, by granting us at length a new, lasting and fruitful period of liberty, glory, felicity and peace.

The Chamber rose amid loud applause, and the President was seated at a banquet in the antechambers, where, by some mistake, nearly all the guests were military men, and the foreign ministers (especially invited) were not present.

Rosario and its prospects

There are few towns in the Argentine Republic more important to the foreigner than Rosario. It is the Chicago of S. America. With a few years of peace, and a settled Government, it would become second to none in the Confederation. The line wars have all but ruined its beautiful property which at one time was so valuable, but fallen fifty per cent within the last 2 years, and the number of shut up shops in the different streets, plainly indicates how trade has been ruined and commerce paralyzed.

Rosario is now just emerging from its sorrows; the numerous River steamers and small craft calling there on their way up or down the river, tend to break the monotony which hitherto prevailed, there is a little more animation in business: the shopkeepers of the interior are coming down to make their purchases, and wearily is agriculture moving with its spasm of speed. We have watched with the greatest interest for the last few months Rosario and her prospects, and we feel delighted to be able to point to as sure our readers that affairs are brightening in that quarter.

The news by last packet reporting the Cordova and Rosario railway was such that we enter into the most sanguine expectations of its ultimate success. Meanwhile, it might not be amiss to open a list for subscribers to the stock when the company is duly formed. We could be most happy to have this list in our office. Where we are sure most of the well wishers of this country, frequently call and who, were the matter in question properly represented, would subscribe according to their means, to further such an undertaking.

There are but few foreign merchants who would refuse to put down their names on the list, and when it was once known that the merchants in this city, both native and foreigners, are willing to become stockholders in the company, the matter would very soon be pushed through at home.

We call upon the men of Rosario to make a move in the matter, in a few years we expect to have cotton coming down from the interior. We must have a railroad. Put your shoulders to the wheel, and depend on it, we will assist it to the utmost.

Editor's Table.

Last Sunday was one of the greatest days for "funciones" probably ever witnessed in the city. 1st, we had the Presidential inauguration, 2nd, the speeches, splendid champagne cocked hats and gold lace.

2nd, we had the Saint Domingo function where all the beauty and fashion of town congregated.

3rd, we had the Argentine Races, dog carts, mascarones, brandy and water and bad cigars.

4th, we had, the Pilar function at the Recoleta, where our suburban beauties, were to be found

5th and last of all, the blow out at the President's house, in the night, strains of soul-stirring music beckoned to the ball-walk, a numerous crowd, to the great inconvenience of "mine host" of the Victoria.

The day passed off well and all parties seemed well pleased.

Yesterday every body was busy for the packet, even the Deputies it would appear were writing per Saturday as there was no session.

Our table is beginning to be overcrowded: communications are pouring in from all quarters, in reply to our Hand book question. We still solicit all useful information, and particularly foreigners' names residing in the interior, we have no doubt that when this book is completed it will possess for foreigners more useful information than any other book ever published in the country.

From Rosario we learn that the Indians are becoming very troublesome, since the diligence robbery they have invaded in the north, carrying off a quantity of cattle, and killing Estancieros, named Pablo Gruniez, Juan Gimin.z, and Sr. Vergalle; they took as captives two beautiful young girls, daughters of Sr Vergalle, and also a son of Dn Marian Ramos.

Rosario

Simon Acosta, a young man of 18 years of age, assists in the Peruvian family, of which he was a relative, and was enjoying himself on a couch had been robbed near the Cruz Alta, province of Cordova, by a party of 12 Indians, amongst which were two white men. They belonged to the new regiments of provincial cavalry recently raised, and were commanded by Cobique, their cacique.

The election of the new President had been celebrated in Rosario with mosque balls.

The Rosario Rural Journal publishes a curious description of the Indians of Araucania presented to the Chilian Government.

FOREIGN MISCELLANY.

The Princess visit to Germany—The visit of the Queen to Germany is regarded more as a matter of pleasure than of business. The Princess Royal, and it is generally understood that Her Majesty will have a considerable amount of business to transact in that capacity. Arrangements will have to be made with respect to Prince Alfred, the presumptive heir to the Duchy of Saxe-Coburg, and the inheritor of his father's property in the Duchy. This, with others matters, will, it is expected, fully occupy the time fixed for the Queen to remain on the Continent:—Court Journal.

—The Marriage of the Prince of Wales.—We are enabled to state that the marriage of the Prince of Wales will take place some time next year. At the present moment no positive arrangements have been made, and we are aware that nothing will be positively made known in regard to the Prince's choice until his return to England from Germany. The probability is, that the Princess Alexandrina of Denmark will be the future Princess of Wales. The princess Alexandrina is in her eighteenth year, having been born in December, 1844. She is the eldest daughter of his Royal Highness Christian, Prince of Denmark, who is the son of the Duke of Schleswig-Holstein Sonderburg Glucksburg, successor to the throne of Denmark on the death of the present King, Frederick VII.—Court Journal.

New Governor and Nat. Cabinet.

The conflicting parties in the Provincial Legislature have agreed to elect, this evening: D. Mariano Saavedra, as Gov. of the province, (extra-muros) of Buenos Aires, until the general election of May 63.

The minister of the prov. Gov. is not yet named.

The National Cabinet is already constructed as follows.

Government..... Doctor Rawson.
Finance..... Sr. Gorostiaga.
Foreign Affairs:... Doctor Costa.
Worship & Instruction. Sr. Vega.
War..... Gen Gelly obes.

We concur in all the above nominations, and learn that the Finance portfolio was tendered to Sr. Riestra who declined the honor.

The Nation and the Province.

The nomination of a Cabinet by the new President, and the agreement, in the Prov. Legislature, to elect D. Mariano Saavedra, Governor, are the great events of the day. The former will give confidence to the nation but the fusion of the individuals called to occupy the distinguished posts of the Ministry the latter is a happy termination to a squabble which threatened dissension among our provincial statesmen.

The new prime-minister, Dr. Rawson, is universally respected for his integrity of character, and profound legislative and statesmanship. He is a native of San Juan, of American parentage, entertaining strong sympathies for the U. States whose Constitution he always takes for a model. He ranks high as a physician and a linguist and, we have no doubt, will display equal talent in his future exalted character.

Sr Gorostiaga has long aspired to direct the Finance department of the Republic, showing his ability in his multiplied writings opposing Sor Elizalde who held that portfolio during the debate on paper-currency and other vexed question. He served as finance-minister in the Paraná cabinet and brings to his new office a considerable fund of experience, besides a great capacity for figures. He post will not be a sinecure owing to the very confused state of the Nat revenues, and the many heavy obligations; he is a warm advocate of the Paraná Bank, and as such may retain public credit that we unanimously hope he may succeed in making both end meet.

Dr. Costa, the champion of capitulation, strangely enough resigns his office to an anti capitulist, Elizalde, the secondary rank of Minister of Foreign affairs. He is the only P. Ayres member of the Cabinet and, although a young man, one of the most popular, especially with foreign ers, owing to his firm attitude in the late angry discussion. He is prominent himself the decided friend of immigration, and we me very happy to find him still in office, for Genero Mitre could scarcely forget his distinguished service in the capital question.

Dr. Augustin Vega, Senator of Patacamaya, takes the portfolio of Worship and Instruction. He is a man of fair talents, and displayed his liberal tendency by opposing the Derqui Gov. in the late Congress of Paraná, where he strongly insisted on the admission of the D.Aryan deputies as "Nacional" puts down Sr. Elizalde instead of Dr. Vega, but the former would scarcely be popular, as his last ministerial service was remarkable for a deficit of 18 millions.

General Gelly y Obes is of the neighbouring republic of Uruguay, whence come all carnillitary celebrities; but no eminent were his exertions during the late war, that he was raised to the dignity of general, and he is perhaps the fittest man to hold an office whose post associations are as brilliant, as the future will be useful.

We hope the Ministry of War will soon grow obsolete, and be survived by the reparation of its chief officer.

The (extra-muril) new Governor D. Mariano Saavedra has been better known as President of the Bank than in any political character, and this is probably the reason that has induced both of the contending parties to pitch on him, as a harmless individual, to hold the direction of the Province. Sr. Riestra was the Inspector of the majority, and he refused the Finance-office of the Nation, probably in expectation of his return as Governor. Major Galvez had also a large party, but the opposition to both was so formidable, that Sr. Saavedra was preferred by all.

Our European readers will see that this last leaves us under favorable circumstances and the two events we have mentioned have been so happily delivered from the womb of time, that we may use a facmiliar expression and say we are getting on as well as may be expected.

Stop Press.

Advices from Chile mention another revolution in Bolivia. Gen. Perez assumed the Presidency at La Paz, deposing President Acha, but the troops remained loyal, and the issue is doubtful.

Immigration.

(Suite.)

Dans d'autres cas on a fondé en outre appels des colonies. Des individus propriétaires de vastes terrains perdus au fond des provinces et par suite sans valeur, ont imaginé d'amener des Européens, de leur donner ces terrains à défricher et ensuite de les leur vendre. Quelques uns ont fait aux émigrants un sort passable; le grande majorité a spéculé sur eux comme on spéculerait auparavant sur les nègres et après avoir extrait de ces malheureux tout ce qu'on pouvait tirer, comme tout autre consommateur agrest, les ont laissés sans ressources disputer aux sauvages, aux bêtes fauves, à tous les fléaux des pays tropicaux leur malheureuse existence.

L'émigration a été principal sous une troisième forme plus avantageuse en apparences pour les émigrants qui, comme gent à contracter les soudfrances et les douleurs devanciers, ne voyaient plus comme tr Pavances des engagements qui devaient être violés dans ce qui leur était invendu et exécutés avec la dernière rigueur dans toutes les parties non importantes des obligations. On les a transportés jusqu'au Brésil, leur remettant quelques argent dans le pays qu'ils quittaient, leur avançant les frais du passage, les nourrissant à l'arrivée et leur promettant qu'une fois débarqués on les laisserait libres de s'employer comme ils le jugeraient convenable.

A leur arrivée, on les parquait dans des espèces de lazarets qu'on appelle hotels pour les colons on les laissait pas sortir de sous p ctexte, prétant délibérés entre la société qui les avait amenés, leur personne répondait pour leur dette et, prisonniers, mal nourris, mal traités, ils attendaient impatiemment que quelqu'un ayan besoin de leurs services vint répondre pour eux à l'entrepreneur d'émigration des avances faites. Devenu son créancier par une reconnaissance de la valeur promis, salaire également du bonheur inhérent au prix de location d'un esclave. Ajoutons qu'on paiait un compte à ces malheureux trois ou quatre fois ce qu'ils avaient coûté, cela formant le bénéfice de l'entrepreneur.

Nous ne faisons aujourd'hui que quelques traits et comptons prochainement nous revenir sur ce sujet; mais on doit déjà prévoir dès à présent combien est triste au Brésil la condition des émigrants et combien est dû être vives les protestations et les réclamations contre un pareil système.

Aussi un grand nombre de pays, choisis par les plaines bien suivant de toutes parts, ont, le traité d'émigration pour le Brésil ou tout au moins des colons, complètement à une prohibition. Nous citerons la France, la Prusse, l'Italie, le Portugal. L'Espagne & la gouvernement de Bebillon est parvenu à faire quelquefois lever cette prohibition, mais il ne paraît pas la confiance et cette défiance, grâce au peu de renseignements géographiques que possèdent les bases classes en Europe, est étendue jusqu'aux Républiques du Rio de la Plata.

Le moyen le plus sûr, le plus rapide et le moins cher d'attirer l'émigration, c'est de bien traiter les colons qui viennent parce que ceux là en appelent d'autres et en font les satisfaits sans beaucoup de peines et sans dépenses. Ils arrivent ensuite bientôt naturels pendant la première qu'ils leur arrivée là trouvent immédiatement à s'employer, ils seront contents, ne tarderont pas à prospérer et aimeront comme lui, presque partout le pays où ils trouvent une existence large et facile.

Il faut d'abord supprimer l'intérêt dû on des avances d'émigrants, ce monopole en était blanche comme les marchands à esclaves étaient commencent en chair noire qui n'eut qu'un but. Les prime par le colon et la cession moins qu'elle pouvait lui ser des vices pendant les cours du voyage qui vont les vendre dans les hospices, dans les colonies, mauvais lieux et jettent sur le pays des cites maladies au physique ou au moral.

Le mieux serait que le pays, que le gouvernement, par des agents directs, sollicitât l'émigration. Se mettant lui-même en avant, ne déclinant aucune responsabilité, il trouverait auprès des gouvernements Européens un appui qui sera toujours refusé aux intermédiaires.

La question du transport est aussi d'une haute importance. Beaucoup de ceux qui seraient disposés à émigrer, surtout en France, ne sont pas en état de payer leur voyage. Si on leur en fait, Pavance, ils se trouvent dès leur arrivée obligés de leur quelque chose qu'ils ne sont pas toujours à même de payer à l'échéance, ce qui donne souvent lieu à des poursuites et les replonge dans cet état précaire dont ils avaient cherché à sortir en s'expatriant. Il ne faut pas perdre de vue que tout nouvel arrivant augment ales revenus de l'état, que la grande majorité des objets qu'il consommera un droit d'entrée, que beaucoup de ce qu'il produira doit payer un droit de sortie et en faisant le calcul de ce que paie au moyenne pour droits de douane chaque individu par an, en tenant compte de ce que l'Européen consomme plus de produits étrangers que le fils du pays, on serait étonné de voir qu'en trois ou quatre ans, un nouvel arrivant a payé à l'état autant et plus que ce qu'a coûté son passage. On pourrait donc, sans grever aucunement le trésor public et au contraire en l'enrichissant, transporter les émigrants sans frais de pays, puis qu'ils rapportent 25 à 30 p$ et que l'état peut aisément compter de 6 à 7 p$.

Il ne semble pas que cette mesure difficile, tout en les laissant complètement libres à leur arrivée, de leur assurer du travail. Les bras manquent partout et les propriétaires, entrepreneurs de travaux, industriels de toute sorte, pourraient aller déclarer, dans une agence spéciale, le nombre et la qualité des individus qu'ils peuvent employer, ainsi que le salaire qu'ils sont disposés à donner. L'émigrant, en arrivant, aurait aussi à choisir entre un certain nombre d'emplois parmi lesquels il pourrait prendre le plus convenable à ses connaissances et à ses goûts.

Nous dirons en passant que le dernier numéro du journal officiel contient un article que nous semblent d'une haute importance.

Mais il a aujourd'hui nous paraît urgent de dire à ceux de nos compatriotes qui nous le font dans la mère patrie.

Si la travail vous manque, si vous avez faim, si vos efforts ne suffisent pas à nourrir votre nombreuse famille, qui que vous soyez, pauvre que le labeur ne vaucrit pas, venez à nous. Notre territoire, ouvert à peine au million d'habitants et pourrait en nourrir cent millions; nous avons toutes les richesses que la nature, dans sa main prodigalité, a répandues sur un sol privilégié. Agriculteurs, pasteurs, bûcherons, mineurs, métallurgistes ouvriers de toutes les industries, vous trouverez vivre en arrivant et, si vous êtes laborieux, si vous aux de l'esprit de conduite, on tardera pas à vous offrir un petit pécule qui exercera rapidement. Ne craignez rien de ce que vous nuisez notre pays le protégeant et les populations nouvelles au milieu desquelles vous viendrez vivre sauront vous estimer et vous accueillir en amis si vous respectez leurs habitudes les coutumes elles respectueuses de vos leurs.

Nous nommons encore beaucoup de choses à vous dire, mais l'espace nous manque et nous remettons dans le numéro prochain notre article.
